Inside the big heart, which represents my friends and family's love, there is a grey box that represents my sad past since it has been locked in my heart with me slowly learning to accept it. The yellow sun in the middle of the box represents the support I got during my tough times, and the black circles around it represent the dark feelings that I want to avoid thinking about. The wave on the bottom of the box represents all my memories in Hawaii like the ocean. The grey buildings on top of the box represent the city of Tokyo. The purple cloud around the heart represents my inner thoughts and the black lightning represents some of the difficulties I face trying to break into the heart. However, it has been stopped for now.
