This year I have accomplished a lot of my goals that I set at the beginning of the year and have exceeded many of my expectations. I have improved exponentially in my science class, doing better than I had ever done before. I turned in almost all of my homework assignments on time this year and avoided slacking off on projects. I have gotten fairly good grades and have reached low honors. My writing and mathematical skills are greater than at the beginning of the year and I know more about myself than ever before. I am really proud of how my poetry has progressed during the year and how I have only gotten one C in all of my classes this year.

There were still many things I did wrong that I wish I had the ability to correct. I wish I could go back to the last grading period so I could turn in all of the homework I did on time and receive full credit. This would have really helped my grades and made my transcript look a lot better. I wished I could have completed some of my goals away from school too. At the beginning of the year, one of the goals I set in this Psychology class was to win my soccer championship again. We lost in the championship game and I wish I could go back and play harder and maybe change the outcome of the game.

Next year I want to accomplish everything I did not this year. I want to win my soccer championship and get even better grades in all of my classes. I want to make sure I stay organized and keep the high standard of work I am doing right now. I want to make sure I know my surroundings and make sure I keep track of when homework is due and try to schedule time for me to work on it ahead of time. I also want to be more careful about what I say on tests and quizzes. I lost a lot of points on common sense questions that I just did not spend enough time reading what I am supposed to do. I hope I can accomplish these new challenges for next year and have another successful year.

During psychology this year I learned a lot about myself and the way I learn. I found out I am a kinesthetic learner and I like to learn information through movements and interactive activities. I can use the information I learned this year in Psychology to find new methods of teaching myself to learn more easily. This will hopefully help me to succeed in improving my grades and focus during class. The easier I make learning, the sassier it becomes for me to put my best work forth. Hopefully the information I have learned during this class will make learning easier for me in the future.
