

Flash Philosophy Questions

1. Does the concept of “fairness” exist in nature, or is it a human-made ideal?
2. Can a lie ever be morally acceptable if it leads to a good outcome?
3. Are humans more naturally good or naturally selfish?
4. Is freedom more valuable than security, or does security come first?
5. Should people be judged by their intentions or by their actions?
6. Is it fair to punish someone for something done out of ignorance?
7. Should people have the right to say anything, even if it’s harmful to others?
8. Can we be happy without knowing sadness?
9. Is freedom worth having if it means living with uncertainty?
10. Are we morally responsible for the effects of our choices even if they are unintentional?
11. Should voting be a right for everyone, or should it require certain qualifications?
12. Is it ethical for governments to control information in the name of national security?
13. Do scarcity and competing interests make political conflict inevitable?
14. Is it better to focus on the present or to prepare for the future?
15. Is revenge ever justified, or does it only lead to more harm?