

Unit Reflection

1. Was this unit fun to teach, and were students engaged? How would it be fun for you as a teacher? If it can't be fun, then why must it stay in the curriculum?
2. What can you confidently say most students learned from this unit? How do you know?
3. What went well and what evidence do you have of this?
4. What are two things that you'd change? If there are no changes, then explain what makes this lesson so good. (Use this to hype it up to students next year.)

5. Explain the strongest connection that a student made to our current times. (Keep this in mind when giving examples of how to make connections for next year's students.)
6. What analogies are you able to make about this learning that relate to real life in a tangible way for students?
7. Consider which students needed more support and which students needed more of a challenge. What changes might you make in the future?
